Jasmine Lawrence
ENTREPRENEURIAL JOURNEY
When Jasmine completed her NFTE BioCamp and pitched her first business, she didn't place first, second, or third in her camp's competition. What she won was more valuable—confidence in her ability to start a new enterprise. Applying what she learned, Jasmine launched Eden Bodyworks, a multimillion dollar company with products on the shelves at Walmart, Walgreens, and other leading retailers. Jasmine also has a passion for technology. She studied engineering and has worked full-time for tech giants like Facebook and Microsoft—all while overseeing her company.

The Hudson Institute website features a custom WordPress CMS and theme, utilizing a bespoke modular layout builder. The desktop version includes a navigation bar with links to Contact, Careers, Hudson Certified Coach Directory, Become a Coach, Organizations, Individuals, Impact, About Us, and Coach Login. The main hero section features a woman standing in front of a wall covered in colorful sticky notes, with the text "Developing leaders to create impact through coaching". Below this, a quote from Pamela McLean, Ph.D., CEO, states: "Great coaching is not about 'fixing and telling'; it is focused on developing great leaders where it matters most." The website also includes sections for "Foundational Programs" (Spot Coaching™, Coach Training, Team Coaching, Executive Coach Panel) and "Learning Methods". The mobile version of the website is also displayed, showing a simplified layout with a quote from Pamela McLean, Ph.D., CEO, and sections for "Organizations" and "Individuals".
